

New customer contact telephone number regulations - The Bad Guys vs. the Good Guys

Regulations introduced on Friday 13 June required numbers offered for telephone contact from customers to be those charged at the “basic rate”. See the regulation and the related guidance.

Calls to numbers beginning 08 (e.g. 0845, 0844, 0871 and 0800) are not charged at the “basic rate”. If these numbers are offered they must be accompanied by an alternative (01, 02 or 03) number, which is charged at the basic rate, presented with equal prominence.

0800 numbers will become free to caller with effect from 29 June 2015, but are currently charged at up to 40p per minute from mobile phones. Many companies offering 0800 numbers to provide free calls for all landline callers therefore offer alternatives for mobile callers.

03 numbers provide the same facilities as 08 numbers but are, in all cases, charged at the same rate as calls to 01/02 numbers, or included in bundles or call plans on exactly the same terms. Many former users of 084 and 087 numbers have taken advantage of the option to migrate to the equivalent 034/037 number, i.e. changing only the second digit of the number from a ‘8’ to a ‘3’.

A formal determination of non-compliance in any specific case may only be made by a court, regardless of interpretations of the law made by ourselves and others.

Consumers may recover excess cost incurred from the trader and may report breaches to the Citizens Advice Consumer Service on 03454 04 05 06 (changed from 0845 ... on 12 June). Trading Standards Officers give advice to businesses and may intervene in serious cases.

The appended list shows pairs of examples, from various sectors, with links to web pages that give the customer contact numbers presented by those which have, and have not, complied.

These examples have been selected only to provide clear examples of the difference between compliance and non-compliance. Please note that this is not a comprehensive list, neither of business sectors affected nor of the cases that could be cited within each sector.

Please refer to the web pages given by the links and, if necessary, refer to the companies involved to ensure that the information provided on the web page is accurate and up to date.

The Trading Standards Institute can provide comments on its interpretation of the law.
